

24 bight mat with 11 bight sides

This is an extension of the 24 bight mat. It won't lay flat like the 24 bight mat, its' intention is to be cup shaped, and tightened onto the base of a bottle, or similar shaped object. You will notice in the center of the knot, where there are six bights, the pattern changes from over-one under-one to over-two under-two. This was done to help the knot lay flat.

This should print sized to lie on a paper towel tube, but a roll of paper will also work. Tape it to the tube, place pins at the gray circles, start anywhere (at a color change works best), and follow the over-under pattern. If the knotwork gets too difficult to see the pattern because of the thickness of the string, you can go into the Word document, and change the size if the insert to suit your needs. If you have any questions, feel free to post them on the website forum of The International Guild of Knot Tyers, or Knot Heads World Wide. The website address on the template.

Pat

